«Фонды библиотек в цифровую эпоху:
традиционные и электронные ресурсы, комплектование, использование»

Российская национальная библиотека

30 марта 2017

17 лет с электронными ресурсами

- Количество электронных ресурсов в мире огромно
- Российские университеты уже имеют доступ к репертуару ведущих мировых ресурсов
- Расширяется спектр систем, позволяющих проводить одновременный поиск по большому количеству ресурсов в единой точке
- При этом уникальность каждого отдельного ресурса по-прежнему очень важна

- Библиотеками накоплен большой опыт работы с разного рода ресурсами
- Пользователи начинают слушать и слышать библиотеку
- Лидерами использования по-прежнему являются представители STM направлений
- Наиболее активно используется оперативная электронная информация/журналы
- ОДНАКО...

Архивная информация

- Пользователям очень важная и подчас не менее, чем оперативная
- Наиболее ценная для представителей гуманитарным и социальных наук
- Большинство пользователей не ожидают, что такая информация существует в электронном виде и не пытаются искать ее

Задача библиотеки

- Задача библиотеки не только откликаться на запросы пользователей – подписывать ресурсы по запросам
- Задача библиотеки опережать ожидания пользователей – рассказать пользователям о ресурсах, которые существуют, но о которых они еще не знают

Запрос пользователя

« Обращаюсь к Вам практически без всякой надежды, т.к. мне нужна ДРЕВНЯЯ статья и ее точно не будет в электронных ресурсах.....»

Поиск статьи занял менее минуты, т.к. она оказалась в доступе СПбГУ в ресурсе JSTOR

Early Journal Content

<http://about.jstor.org/service/early-journal-content>

Более 500 000 статей из более 200 журналов доступны бесплатно. Американские статьи, опубликованные ранее 1923 года и не американские статьи – до 1870 года.

The screenshot shows the JSTOR website interface for the Early Journal Content service. At the top, there is a navigation bar with links for "FOR LIBRARIANS", "FOR PUBLISHERS", and "FOR INDIVIDUALS", along with a search icon. The main heading is "Early Journal Content". Below this, a paragraph states: "On September 6, 2011, we made journal content in JSTOR published prior to 1923 in the United States and prior to 1870 elsewhere freely available to anyone, anywhere in the world. This 'Early Journal Content' includes discourse and scholarship in the arts and humanities, economics and politics, and in mathematics and other sciences. It includes nearly 500,000 articles from more than 200 journals. This represents 5% of the content on JSTOR." A second paragraph explains: "While JSTOR currently provides access to scholarly content to people through a growing network of more than 10,000 institutions in 170 countries, we also know there are independent scholars and other people that we are still not reaching in this way. Making the Early Journal Content freely available was an initial step in a larger effort to provide more access options to the content on JSTOR for these individuals. Following the release of the Early Journal Content, we launched Register & Read, which offers free, read-online access to more recent content for individual scholars and researchers who register for a MyJSTOR account." A third paragraph encourages: "We encourage broad use of the Early Journal Content, including the ability to reuse it for non-commercial purposes. For more information, please refer to the Early Journal Content section in our Terms & Conditions of Use. A brief video tutorial about how to access this content is also available. We also provide a free..." On the right side, there is a sidebar titled "FOR INDIVIDUALS" with links for "Explore Content on JSTOR", "JPASS", "Register & Read", "Publisher Sales Service & Subscriptions", "New to JSTOR? Open Access eBooks: Information for Librarians

Open Access monographs are now available on the JSTOR platform at no cost to libraries or users. More than 500 titles are now available from respected presses, such as University of California Press, University of Michigan Press, and ANU Press, and the collection will continue to grow. View the title list here, and please share the link with researchers at your institution.

We believe that working with publishers to make Open Access monographs discoverable alongside other types of content on a highly used platform will increase their usage and impact. The Open Access titles are cross-searchable with journals and primary sources on JSTOR. We are providing chapter level discovery, as we do for all 45,000+ ebooks on JSTOR today. Please see below for information on integrating these titles into library catalogs and discovery services.

Rembrandt and his Contemporary Critics

Seymour Slive

Journal of the History of Ideas, Vol. 14, No. 2 (Apr., 1953), pp. 203-220

...he used have done little to explode the legends which surround Rembrandt and his work. The Ur-myth on Rembrandt states that Rembrandt was a howling success and amassed a tremendous fortune in Leiden and Amsterdam until 1642, when he painted the Night Watch, a group portrait of the civic guards who served under Captain Cocq. All Amsterdam was shocked, runs the tale, when Rembrandt delivered this painting. Such audacity! Rembrandt dared attempt to change the traditional Dutch group portrait! The men...

4.3 Biostratigraphy and phylogenetic evolution

During the Cretaceous, planktonic foraminiferal assemblages exhibit short biostratigraphic ranges and so enable relatively high-resolution stratigraphic correlations to be made (e.g., see Figs. 4.6–4.15). The systematics and biostratigraphy of these forms have been extensively studied, and a number of taxonomic based on species-level occurrences have been erected (see Charts 4.1–4.4, 4.5), which replaced many of the praehedbergellids at the Aptian–Albian boundary, the retalioidids, which evolved from the hedbergellids in the Albian and Cenomanian (Fig. 4.9), and the beledid and compressed globobaccasellids, which first evolved from the hedbergellids in the Late
