Полнотекстовые открытые ресурсы “Open Access” как альтернатива традиционной издательской модели

- В течение последних 10 лет количество научных статей в открытом доступе приблизилось к 50% от общего числа опубликованных статей за этот период

- Источник: The Scientific Electronic Library Online - SciELO (Бразилия)
<http://www.scielo.br/>

The screenshot shows the SciELO website interface. At the top, there is a red banner with the text "SciELO in Perspective" and language options for Portuguese, English, and Spanish. Below the banner is a navigation menu with categories like GENERAL and HUMANITIES, and sub-categories like HOME, NEWS, ANALYSIS, METHODOLOGY, INTERVIEWS, and NEWSLETTER. The main content area features an article titled "Open access articles are here to stay: in less than 10 years nearly 50% of articles worldwide can be accessed this way". The article is dated August 28, 2013, and is by Ernesto Spinak. It includes social media sharing buttons for Facebook (1 Like), Twitter (3 Tweet), Google+ (1+), and YouTube (7 Share). A print icon is also visible. The article text discusses the impact of open access on research democratization and mentions the SciELO project's history since 1998.

When embarking on a long journey, arriving at the half-way point of the trip has, more than anything, a deep psychological impact – it is a significant milestone on the way; we feel inside that from this moment we are now not “on the way” but rather “we are arriving”.

During the 1990’s, a movement began in various prestigious universities worldwide to make their publications freely available as a way of democratizing the results of research. In 1998, SciELO emerged as a pioneering pilot project in this area with only 10 journals at its disposal with none of them coming from “the first world” (Packer, 2009). This took place a number of years before the Open Society’s famous Budapest Declaration, the Berlin conferences and other initiatives in this regard. Ten journals seemed like nothing, when commercial journal publishers produce many thousands of subscription based journals.

Причины опережающего роста числа открытых публикаций

- Новые условия и формы научной деятельности (гранты, международные и национальные научные проекты) создают рынок идей и научных результатов
- Социальные и профессиональные сети открывают новые возможности взаимодействия ученых
- Государственная политика в отношении неограниченного доступа к результатам исследований, проводимых за государственный счет

Открытый доступ (Open Access): основные издательские технологии

- Золотой путь (OA Gold) - публикация статьи в электронном журнале открытого доступа или открытой статьи в подписном журнале
- Зеленый путь (OA Green) - помещение статьи в электронный архив открытого доступа (институтский или общественный)

Детальный анализ состава и количества открытых научных публикаций

Исследование Европейской комиссии Proportion of Open Access Papers Published in Peer-Reviewed Journals at the European and World Levels—1996–2013

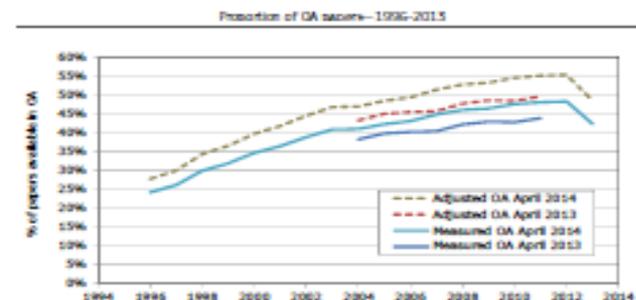

Figure 2 Evolution of the proportion of OA scientific papers as measured in April 2013 and April 2014, 1996–2013

Source: Computed by Science-Matrix using Scopus, DOI and numerous sources of freely downloadable papers.

Source: Computed by Science-Matrix using Scopus, DOI and numerous sources of freely downloadable papers.

These estimates were used to produce an estimate of the backfilling of old papers published between 1996 and 2011 that were made available for free during the year separating the measures made in April 2013 and those made in April 2014. This estimate is presented in Figure 4. According to this model, close to 14,000 papers published in 1996 were made available for free during the last year, and nearly 100,000 papers published in 2011. Backfilling is really important to understand how OA grows: a total of 700,000 papers published between 1996 and 2011, as indexed in Scopus, were made available for free between April 2013 and April 2014. Considering that there are about 18 million papers in Scopus for this period, this represents an increase in availability of 3.9 percentage points.

Некоторые выводы на основе исследования

- Начиная с апреля 2014 года в открытом доступе представлены более 50% всех научных статей, опубликованных с 2007 по 2012 гг.

- Из 21 млн. статей, проиндексированных Scopus за период 1996-2013, 47% (10,1 млн. статей) представлены в открытом доступе

- Число научных статей в открытом доступе ежегодно увеличивается на 9,4%

- Опережающими темпами идет рост открытых статей в журналах – OA Gold (18%) по сравнению с архивами – OA Green (8,8%)

Роль библиотеки в обеспечении доступа читателей к открытым ресурсам

- Предоставление читателю ссылок на открытые электронные платформы и открытые журналы
- Поиск открытых статей в «гибридных» журналах
- Отслеживание изменений
- Получение и анализ статистики доступа

В этом случае открытые ресурсы дополняют библиотечный фонд и сокращают расходы

Исследование Университета Брэдли
(Bradley University)

<http://www.carli.illinois.edu/sites/files/training/OpenAccessArticlesbyChen.pdf> :

1. Около 1/3 электронных статей, приобретенных библиотекой через ЭДД, можно было найти в открытом доступе
2. Причина – средства навигации не успевают за развитием открытого доступа
3. Труднее всего – поиск в гибридных журналах
